Support our growth, and donate today!

We're turning 10 this year! We were first incorporated as a U.S. nonprofit following the 2010 earthquake in Haiti, and have grown tremendously since. Thanks to the combined support of our global community of linguists, language experts, and donors, we've made a significant change in the lives of many people who speak marginalized languages.

With your support:

- We assisted with translation following the disasters caused by the earthquake in Haiti, tsunamis in Indonesia, cyclones in Mozambique, and hurricanes in the USA to help better crisis response.
- We contributed to programs in over 80 countries, from Afghanistan to Zimbabwe.
- We worked with Microsoft to build an award-winning translation system for Congolese Swahili, "Kiswahili" for Microsoft Translator.
- We delivered 1,900 medical articles in 83 languages to help about 40 million people access free and correct health information.
- We built an offline machine translation engine for Sorani and Kurmanji to translate content for Kurdish refugees.
- We helped Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh by deploying teams of professional linguists and interpreters to help facilitate and improve communication between the refugees and humanitarian aid workers.
- We created multilingual chatbots to provide people in the Democratic Republic of Congo and Nigeria with accurate and reliable COVID-19 and Ebola information; we also built a bot for the International Organization for Migration, available in Spanish across three countries.
- We translated over 6 million words of COVID-19 content into 106 languages, and developed COVID-19 terminology resources in 58 languages.

- We started creating language maps in over 60 languages for organizations to better prepare for multilingual communication.
- We started developing open-source speech recognition software for Hausa in Nigeria to help humanitarians better collect data from speakers of marginalized languages in low-literacy contexts.

We've learned and experienced so much when it comes to language equality, education, and crisis response, which has only inspired us to do more. That's why we decided to expand our brand, and become CLEAR Global, including Translators without Borders, CLEAR Tech, and CLEAR Insights. We'll have skilled people working on amazing projects based on data, research, and technology to further our impact across the world, and make sure everyone has a voice in the decisions that affect their lives.

Given that there are 4 billion people deprived of fair information access, there's a lot to be done. But, we're motivated, driven, and determined to tackle this challenge. Knowing there are so many who share our vision to help people get vital information, and be heard, whatever language they speak, we know we can achieve great things. And most importantly, we are ready.

Of course, our projects wouldn't have been possible without the dedication of our community, our partners, sponsors and supporters. For that, we are deeply grateful.

If you also want to support our growth, there wouldn't be a better opportunity to do so than for our anniversary.
